Tasmanian Crocoite Up Close

WITH TYLER B. THOMPSON

In January, in the middle of the Australian summer, Tyler and Paula were afforded a rare opportunity for a personal tour of the world's premier locale for the bright red-orange mineral crocoite. The Adelaide Mine in Tasmania is the only actively worked source of crocoite specimens, the state mineral of Tasmania. In the past few years several new pockets have been discovered, most recently the spectacular "Red River Find" in 2012. Fortuitously our intrepid travelers from Midland showed up just days after the principal miner had broken into a new access for the Red River Find. Armed with an HD video camera, they donned miner's boots, rubber suits, and hard hats equipped with the latest LED miner's lights and threaded their way through the narrow, wet tunnels to behold the greatest show since Christmas!

Please join us on Tuesday, May 7, 2013, at the Chippewa Nature Center.
